1. The General Directorate of Labor Surplus (Directiunea Generala a Surplusului de Munca-DGSM) rented its services to various enterprises needing labor. Such enterprises paid the DGSM for each skilled and/or unskilled drafted worker a salary of 24 lei or 17 lei per hour according to the worker's qualifications. This salary was the official standard salary determined by government regulations (Indicatorul Tarifar de Salarizare).
2. Any contract between the DGSM and an employer enterprise provided for an 8-hour work day for each drafted worker. In cases where the draftees performed work above their daily assigned norm, a bonus was paid by the enterprise. Half of this bonus went to the DGSM and the other half to the worker himself for encouragement. In cases where the daily norm was not reached, either by a single worker or by workers operating in teams, the enterprise had the right to request that overtime be performed until the norm was reached. No compensation was paid for such overtime. Usually all disputes arising from the interpretation of the performed daily norm were discussed by the enterprise with the Chief of the DGSM unit assigned to the work.
